

No. 33

October 1975

CLANSMAN, formerly the British & Commonwealth Review, is the magazine of the B&C group, its associated companies, staff and pensioners.

IN THIS ISSUE

	Page
Group trade review .. ..	1
All in a ship's work .. ..	4
Staff diary .. ..	10
Obituary .. ..	14
Railway puzzle .. ..	14
CLANSMAN crossword .. ..	16
Readers' letters .. ..	16
Sport and social .. ..	18
Personality spot .. ..	20
Pensioners' reunion .. ..	21
Fishing from B&C ships .. ..	22
My brief brush with boats .. ..	24
CLANSMAN contacts .. ..	inside back cover
Advertisement .. ..	back cover

Manifest, with crew lists, is issued as a separate supplement with every copy.

COVER

Four Hunter aircraft scream across the sky in perfect formation—part of the performance put on by The Blue Herons, a new aerobatic team formed by pilots of Airwork Services Ltd., stationed at RNAS Yeovilton, where Airwork flies training sorties for the Navy. See story page 7. Picture: Crown copyright.

CLANSMAN is published for the B&C group by Cayzer, Irvine & Co. Ltd., Cayzer House, 2 & 4 St. Mary Axe, London EC3A 8BP. Telephone: 01-283 4343.

Printed by Maund & Irvine Ltd., at Brookside Works, Tring, Herts.
Editorial consultant: Marcus Clarke.

CLANSMAN is issued six times a year and circulated on the Registered Readership system. Registration fee (UK): 30p. Note that opinions expressed in the magazine are not necessarily those of B&C group management.

Never mind
where you got the suntan, Linda — it was a summer to remember

■ It must have been her beautiful suntan that attracted a Sunday Mirror photographer to take this picture of Linda Wells enjoying this year's fine British summer on Margate beach. Linda, aged 18, works in the City general office of Scottish Lion Insurance. But as a "come to Britain" appeal Linda's suntan proved less than skin-deep: when the Margate picture was taken she'd just come back from sunning herself in Benidorm, Spain. Thanks, Sunday Mirror, anyway.