Tribute to William Forde

After the sudden death of William Forde, formerly chief refrigeration engineer on board Windor Castle, the ship's crew expressed their respect and admiration by a collection of £150 for the Missions to Seamen in Belfast, William Forde's home port.

The money was used to purchase a number of articles of furniture for the main lounge and during a special ceremony on Tuesday, March 21 S. N. Harron, chief engineer, in the presence of the Forde family and friends, unveiled a plaque in his memory and asked the Bishop of Connor, president of the Missions to Seamen, to receive the gifts on behalf of the Mission.

R. J. Bartlett, technical secretary, travelled from London for the occasion, and during his speech mentioned that he could not recall such a contribution to a colleague before.

Colour TV gift

The sports and social club from Windor Castle has brought much happiness into the lives of the sick by the presentation to hospitals of colour television sets. On Thursday, May 18 yet another set was presented, this time to Ashurst Hospital at Ashurst in Hampshire.

The presentation was made by Commodore R. M. Wright, accompanied by the staff commander and six other members of the sports and social club. This is the fifth television set the club has now presented.

Retirement: George Crimble

George Herbert Crimble retired from the position of head bedroom steward on Pendennis Castle on April 23. George has held the same position on Pendennis Castle since August 15, 1961.

He started his career as a bell boy with White Star Line, joining the company on September 16, 1938 as assistant steward Stirling Castle on which vessel he served throughout the war. He then moved to Athlone Castle before joining Pendennis.
